The pleasure-seeking party was at first taken down the Ohio as far as Davis Island dam, then the boat turned around again, and going up the Monogahela river the trip was extended as far as McKeesport. ## ONE SQUAW'S DOWRY

Of Real Estate Which is Now Worth Any Quantity of Money.

A VERY BIG SLICE OF DULUTH

Has Just Been Awarded to a Long Persevering Claimant.

FROM $5,000,000 TO $15,000,000 IN IT.

The Original Owner Sold the Property to Two Differ ent Parties.

A large portion of Duluth has been awarded to Frederick D. Prentice by the courts. He purchased it many years ago from a man who received it as a dowry with an Indian maiden. It was afterward resold to another party, who made out deeds to the mesent occupants. The value of the property is from $5,000,000 to $15,000,000.

ISPECIAL TELEGRAM TO THE DISPATCH.1 DULUTH, MINN., June 28 .- Frederick D. Prentice, a New York millionaire, has been awarded possession of half of Duluth by Judge Parish, of the Circuit Court, at Ashland, Wis. The property is valued at over $5,000,000. The history of the case is a most interesting one. Mr. Prentice, who was born in Ohio 65 years ago, and made his first money in lumbering, visited 30 years ago the Lake Superior copper mines for the purpose of inspecting them with a view to Ashland and Duluth had no existence then, beyond the latter's having a small Indian settlement, but Mr. Prentice saw their eligibility for becoming centers of population, and made for becoming centers of population, and made beavy purchases of land in what is now the best portion of Asland and the undivided half of 160 acres in Duluth, which is now in litiga-tion, paying for the latter something like $2.000. He acquired it from one Benjamin Armstrong, a white man, who received it as a dower of his wife, a daughter of the Chippewa Indian Chief Buffalo, to whom the United States issued a patent for a section of land, or 649 acres, in what had formerly been the Chippewa reserva-tion.

A quarter of this section, or 160 acres, was given to the chief's daughter in his distribution his land among his children. Shaw-Braw Skung (Armstrong's Indian name), after sell-ing an undivided half of this to Mr. Prentice, old it to John M. Gilman, and the land in resold it to John M. Gilman, and the land in controversy is now held under deeds from the latter. Mr. Prentice does not seem to have paid much attention to the course of events, and it was only three years ago that he instituted suit to recover his property.

The case was decided against him in the United States Court sitting at St. Paul, and before he took an appeal the limitation of time allowed for that purpose was passed. Under the Minnescta laws, however, he was able to resume the case de

John F. Bair, agent of the Wheeling Soap Company, at No. - Virgin alley, Pittsburg, last evening received the following letter from Charlotte Smith, President of the Woman's National Industrial League: WASHINGTON, D. C., June Z., 1889. John F. Bair, Esq., Agent Wheeling Soap Com-

I inclose you a letter I addressed the Governor in relation to the Johnstown orphans. I have reason for believing that rings and cliques are engaged in the misappropriation of the funds generously contributed for the Johnstown sufferers, and ask your co-operation in finding out the truth in this regard, and if true, your assistance in exposing them. The Governor has not as yet thought proper to respond to the purport of my letter, which convinces me that any suggestion of mine, or the interposition of others in the premises does not meet his approval, or engage his interest.

I am authorized by the Senate Committee to investigate the status of industrial women, etc., and if we question comes before the Legislature I would ask your co-operation, etc.

I have not been able to go to Johnstown as yet, but have private correspondence there. Please answer. Yours, etc., CHARLOTTE SMITH.

but have private correspondence there. Please answer. Yours, etc., CHABLOTTE SMITH.

The letter of Charlotte Smith to Governor Beaver, to which reference is made in the foregoing, was written June 10, and was published in the Washington Post of June 11. In it she says that she notices in the papers that the Wast's Mission is doing a noble work in Johnstown, but suggests that while it reads well, yet the children of the Johnstown disaster should be the wards of the State of Pennsylvania. The State should establish a home and provide for them until they arrive at the age of discretion. They should have an industrial, practical education. Generous impulses, she says, are spasmodic, and those who volunteer to take care of the children may tire of them when those impulses subside and the waifs may be made slaves and mistreated in the end. Mrs. Smith says she has seen so much of the workings of so-called charitable institutions that she is convinced that it is the duty of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania to erect an orphan asylum on the beights above Johnstown, and keep them there. It would be a burning disgrace to a great State like Pennsylvania, she says, to farm out the children to satisfy the greed, avarice and aims of private individuals.

The sub-Allegheny Park Committee Grounds met yesterday afternoon to consider the matter of leasing Monument Hill to a private corporation for the establishment of a private corporation for the establishment of a noological garden, also a project to beautify the hill. The latter was asked to prepare plans and an estimate of the cost. The total cost of this improvement, Mr. Ehlers estimates, will be about $20,000. This money will either come from the contingent fund or bonds will be issued to cover the expense. The report will be recommended to the general body at the next meeting.

On the return trip the boat threw anchor at the National Tube Works and all the guests went ashore here to pay a visit to the works. A dispatch from Oil City, received last evening, said: "The Derrick has positive and entirely reliable information that the producers' oil, which has ceaused so much concern to the speculative trade, was sold to the Standard Oil Company at to-day's closing market."

This has been expected for some few days past, as the six months' option given the producers to sell their 6,000,000 barrels of oil had expired, and there was much conjecture as to what would become of it. It has been whispered that Joe Craig was endeavoring to control the producers' possessions, but a prominent broker said lass night that if Mr. Craig wished to buy that oil he would be compelled to pay a higher price than the Standard, and this, of course, would be nonsensical. The monopoly was bound to have it, and it has been conceded to it by all brokers and oil men. This will necessarily curtail further the already paucity of certificates.

Mr. Grena, June 28.—The alumni and undergraduates of Trinity College, Hartford, Conn., who intend passing a week in camp at this notable military resort, on the invitation of Robert H. Coleman, of the class of '77, were treated to an aqueous initiation on their arrival this evening, the rain descending in torrents for over an hour, and the blue and gold colors of the college floating from a number of flag staffs received a veritable baptism. A special train from Hartford and New York landed over 100 college people, among them Profs. Ferguson, McCook, Robb, Riggs, of the Trinity faculty, and the baseball nine and glee club connected with the institution. All the New England States, New York, Pennsylvania and other States were represented in the delegation. Another train brought college campers from Detroit, Cleveland, Pittsburg and other cities. The alumni and undergraduates camped on the ground will be reinforced to-morrow and Monday by several hundred more of invited guests of the 630 who were requested by Mr. Coleman to participate in the renunce. The 200 tents erected surround the spot where General Sheridan, stwo years ago, reviewed the 8,000 members of the National Guard. The camping ground commands an excellent view of the beautiful Conewago Lake and the grand mountains which rear their majestic heights nearby.

During their stay the alumni and undergraduates can be a served to the character of the served the state of the size of the college document of the college of a mild form of the three qualifications required for a wholesale dealer, and at best them to be observed that this sentirely out of the case. For several days she had been under the professional care of Dr. Fulton, but her mental condution did not improve. She secured the pistol with which the deed was committed from her son's room, and muffled herself up with pillows in order to deaden the sound, and no one knew of her death until several hours afterward. During their stay the alumni and under-graduates will be treated to a number of de-lightful entertainments. They will be con-veyed to the exhaustless Cornwell ore mines, to the Pennsylvania Steel Works and other points of interest within a radius of 25 miles. All special trains during the encampment will be free, and a brass band will discourse music on the ground every evening. Four or five games of baseball will be played during the reunion.

A SERIOUS FIRE LAST NIGHT.

Three Herses Roasted Alive and Two Men

Hurt, One Dangerously. An alarm from box 54 fast night at 8:55 was caused by a fire in the stable of John Sang, at No. 12 Miller street. The stable was totally destroyed with three horses he valued at $700. The fire was first discovered by Christ Sang, son of William Sang, who went to the stable to try and get the horses out. He had succeeded in getting one of the horses out and it ran back into the stable, taking young Sang with him. The fire had gained headway, and before he got out of the stable he was badly burned about the face, breast and arms. He was taken to McNalley's drug store, at the corner of Miller street and Center avenue, and Dr. McCord called in to dress his burns, which were found dangerous. The hair on his head was completely burned off. He was then taken to his home, No. 23 Miller street. The fire was first discovered by Christ Sang,

The stable was completely burned down, and the three horses were roasted alive. Hugh Gibson, who lives on Perry street, was helping the firemen, fell down a stairway in front of No. 14 Miller street, striking his head against a sharp board, cutting an ugty gash and also spraining his right arm. He was taken to his home in the patrol wagon. Mr. Sang had no insurance.

THE LAW LAID DOWN.

here, and to show that the refusal of the lice was the exercise of a sound judicial discretion expressly authorized by law. It follows from what has been said that had this case been SUCCEEDS TO AN ABANDONED SCHEME expressly authorized by law. It follows from what has been said that had this case been brought here upon a writ of certiorari it would necessarily have been reversed. In this respect it differs widely from application for a retail license and the reason is that in the latter instance the discretionary powers of the Court are much broader. The license may be refused, not only because the Court regards the applicant vs an unfit person to sell liquor, or if fit that his house is not needed in the particular nelighborhood for the accommodation of strangers and travelers. The present case, however, is here upon an application for a mandamus which involves considerations not referred to in Pollard's case.

It is perhaps fortunate that in the cases of so much magnitude, involving very large pecuniary interests, no orderly mode of practice has been prescribed by, the act of Assembly or adopted by the courts. The licensing of wholesaie dealers has herefore been regarded so much as a matter of course that but very few cases have reached this Court under prior acts of Assembly. In the meager reports of the one or two cases which have reached us it is difficult to gather the facts and the per curiam opinious fail to show that the distinction between wholesale and retail dealers has ever been called to our attention. We do not find anywhere any allusion to the proper mode of procedure in the matter of applications for a wholesale license.

When the application of the petitioner came up for consideration in the court below there was neither remonstrance nor objection upon the record against the granting of the license.
There was no issue before the court. There was no disputed question of fact for it to decide, and the act of May 24, 1837, does not confer upon the Court of Quarter Sessions the powers of a roving commission to inquire as to matters not properly before the court and in no way connected with the petitioner's right to a brewer's license.

and as there were no disputed questions of facts, there could have been no valid finding of facts. We might well, therefore, withou or lacts. We might well, therefore, without more, discard the entire return of the learned Judges of the Quarter Sessions to the writ of al ernative mandamus. That we may not seem wanting in respect to them, I will proceed to its consideration.

wanting in respect to them, I wan points consideration.

We all agree that we are bound by the return to the writ: and if it discloses a sufficient ground to refuse the license we can go no further. It follows that the common law rule as the certainty of the return must be applied, keeping this in view and also the fact that the objections to the petitioner's application must be confined to the questions of—First, citizenship; second, temperate habits, and third, good moral character. I will briefly consider this return.

ship; second, temperate habits, and third, good moral character. I will briefly consider this return.

As preliminary the Judges say: Before deciding said application said Coart deemed it to be its duty to determine whether the applicants were citizens of the United States, of temperate habits, of good moral character and fit persons to receive a license. The first three matters were proper subjects of inquiry. If there was objection made upon either of these grounds it was the plain duty of the Court to hear the evidence and decide as to the part of the return I have italicised. It was a matter with which the Court had nothing to do in the case of an applicant for a wholesale license. They have nothing to do with it because of the act of 24th of May confers no such power upon them. It is incorporating into the wholesale act a provision of the retailized.

The key to the whole difficulty, may perhaps, be found in the assumption of a discretion of wholesale license which is not found in the law and which is applicable only to the case of retailers. The fitness of a man to have a wholesale license which is not found in the law and which is applicable only to the case of retailers. The fitness of a man to have a wholesale license which is not found in the law and which is applicable only to the case of retailers. The fitness of a man to have a wholesale idense which is not found in the law and which is applicable only to the case of retailers. The of the Court upon other matters outside of them. It appears that at the hearing in the court below the main question was as to the manufacture and sale of a mild form of beer called ambrosia.

It is to be observed that this is entirely outside of the case. It has no bearing upon either of the three qualifications required for a wholesale dealer, and at best refers to a rambling inquiry not properly before the Court. The license which the company held authorized them to manufacture and sell beer to any person who was

The return then proceeds: "The Court did find (A) that the said company had conducted its business during the year then expiring in vio-lation of law. It did further find (B) that said company was not a fit person to receive the license applied for, and (C) that so far as it was possible for a corporation to possess any moral character, it did not possess a good moral character."

There are three subjects referred to in this portion of the return and for convenience I have divided them. As to the first (A), what law has the company violated in the conduct of its business? The return does not inform us. Instead of facts we are given a mere conclusion of law. The averment is so vague that it has no force whatever. In regard to the second branch (B), I have already said that the fitness of the courant to receive a license is second branch (B), I have already said that the fitness of the company to receive a license is not in the discretion of the Court below unless from one of the three causes of disqualification before mentioned. A return generally that that applicant is not a fit person to receive a brewer's license without specifying for what cause is bad for uncertainty, and is, moreover, evasive. The return does say, however, that so far as it was possible for a corporotion to possess any moral character "it did not possess a good moral character."

Corporations Can Have No Character. It is difficult to treat this proposition so riously, yet it is the only matter in this return riously, yet it is the only matter in this return which even gives color or legality to the resusal of this license. That a corporation, an invisible, intangible thing, an artificial being, created by the law, can have a character of any kind, is a novel proposition. That the learned Judges below so regarded it is evident by the qualifications in their return. But the corporation had officers and a board of directors. If the Court below had found upon evidence and so returned that said officers and directors were not of good moral character, I apprehend the return would have been sufficient.

At the same time I doubt whether any one of the learned Judges of the court below would have been willing to put his name to a return that the officers and directors of this corporation were respectively men of bad moral character. The return that the borporation has not a good moral character is insensible. There is nothing else in the return which requires comment. Our c-sclusion is that it sets forth no valid reason why the petitioner should not be licensed. The former writ was alternative. The writ of peremptory mandamus is now awarded. It will probably be found unnecessary to issue it.
